

“data” Data Group Type

A data type of data group is simply an empty record into which you can add values using data items. No other options are available.

This can be useful if, for example, you need to supply a DSD with specific values such as parameters or codes. Placing them in a “data” data group makes them available in other data groups.

This type of data group can have only one record/row.